

Special Notice: Debbie Friedman

As you probably have already heard, Debbie Friedman died Sunday in a hospital in southern California due to complications after contracting a bacterial infection in England. As I'm sure you know, Debbie was a writer, composer, performer, and teacher who touched the lives of millions of Jews around the world through her music. Her music is used in hundreds of synagogues. There was a live stream of a Memorial Service for Debbie at the JCC in Manhattan which is worth watching. The address is:

http://www.ustream.tv/channel/service-at-the-jcc#utm_campaign=synclickback&source=http://www.jewishjournal.com/debbie_friedman/article/online_memorial_service_scheduled_to_remember_debbie_friedman_live_video_20/&medium=6778714

Several thousand people from around the world (including Australia, New Zealand, Israel, South Africa, Europe, Argentina, and North American) virtually attended the service by means of the live stream.

Debbie Friedman's funeral is today (Tuesday, January, 11, 2011 at 2:00 PM EST at Temple Beth Sholom in Santa Ana, California. It will be broadcast (streamed) live on the Internet. The address is below:

<http://tbsoc.com/debbie/>